Pictures tell thousands of words...these told a life time. Aunt Bernice would be so proud. She had that “gift” with pictures. She saved the stories of generations in a he many albums she archived to pass down to her family. You learn from them, like “I didn’t know she played the accordion!” You remember things, like the sassy attitude I always loved about her that totally shows in the picture of her standing with her hip out in rolled up jeans and saddle shoes! She could be a spit fire. I have so many fond memories of her and Uncle Bump...thank God. 💕

What a beautiful tribute for Aunt Bernice. She was a loving, caring person that showed through in all the pictures and how her and Uncle Bump raised such a nice family. She will be missed. Our thoughts and love go out to all of you 🙏

“ *I first met Bernice 64 years ago when she was a teenager and getting married to my oldest step brother AL [Bump]. She was strikingly beautiful back then. She took me to my first driver's test (by the way which I failed). I have many, many memories of her through the years. I did not spend a lot of time with her and Bump, but I loved them both dearly.
