“ Where to start!! She was there for me on Christmas Eve in 1963. Our family was having a sad Holiday season or at least I was. My dad had giving my brother a tap recorder for Christmas and he had recorded a messages for all of us. My message was to get my head out the clouds and say hello once in a while. This was also the start of my father disowning me. Well enough about me. At this time she was married to Harry (which also passed away in the last 6 months) they came over to our house as they had many times before that Christmas Eve. She noticed right away something was wrong with me. After visiting a while, she suggested to my mother that I come home with them and spend the night. She told my mother that Harry needed help with some of the gifts. I still remember her tucking me in that night like I was her own son. It still brings tears to my eyes. Vivian you were a great lady and my angel. It has been a number of years since I last say her and her family (42 year to be exact). I just needed to share this memory with her family and friends.
